The software solution for ventilation systems DDS-CAD Mechanical is designed for the design of ventilation and air conditioning systems. The program implements all the basic functions necessary for the design of ventilation systems. A set of parameters obtained from the CAD system is used as initial information. The program comes with a wide range of libraries of standard designs. To create new models, methods similar to those used in AutoCAD are used. It is also possible to select any of the design algorithms existing in the program. DDS-CAD Mechanical software allows you to design:
