A 55-year-old man was admitted to our hospital with a 2-month history of high fever and progressive dyspnea. Chest radiographs revealed bilateral hilar lymphadenopathy. A right hilar lymph node biopsy showed diffuse infiltration of immunoblastic cells. The serum levels of IgG and IgM were elevated, and the levels of IgA were within the normal range. A T-cell antibody was negative. A diagnosis of angioimmunoblastic lymphadenopathy with systemic lymphadenopathy (AILD) was made. Polymerase chain reaction (PCR) analysis of peripheral blood mononuclear cells revealed clonal rearrangements of the immunoglobulin heavy chain gene, indicating a monoclonal proliferation of B cells. A high-grade B-cell lymphoma of the lung was suspected. Although chemotherapy was not effective, the patient died of progressive respiratory failure. Autopsy revealed a diffuse large cell lymphoma involving most of the lung. The tumor cells had the characteristic morphologic features of diffuse large cell lymphoma, but also showed plasmacytoid differentiation. These findings suggest that AILD and high-grade B-cell lymphoma of the lung may be two distinct diseases, with similar features in their immunohistology.
