Heart Risk Calculator is an app designed to estimate a 10-year risk of coronary heart disease in adults that are 30 or older. It takes into account several aspects, such as your gender, age, total cholesterol, and HDL. Metro-style app for evaluating the risk of heart disease You should be aware that this sort of software cannot possibly replace the advice of a doctor. Therefore, to make sure you're on the right track, you should see a cardiologist. This is a Metro program that can be easily deployed on computers running Windows 8, 8.1 and 10, even touch-supported devices like tablets. Because it doesn't need an Internet connection to work, you can use it to calculate heart risk even when you're offline. Set your cholesterol, blood pressure, and other aspects In the main window, you can set your gender, age, total cholesterol (ranging from under 160 mg/dl to over 280 mg/dl), HDL (ranging from under 35mg/dl to over 59mg/dl) and blood pressure (ranging from under 120 to 140-159 with under 80 to 90-99), as well as tell the tool whether you're a diabetic or a smoker. Based on this information, Heart Risk Calculator determines your coronary heart risk for the next 10 years, showing an estimate percentage level along with all the inputted data. View a percentage level and share all data Although the developer hasn't implemented features for copying everything to the Clipboard, printing it or saving it to file, it's possible to take a screenshot and send the picture to an external Modern UI program, in order to save the image to file or share it with a friend or family member whose heart risk you have evaluated. Heart Risk Calculator is free to download and use for personal usage, but you can also donate a few dollars to support the project. How to use Heart Risk Calculator? 1. Click the app icon on your Windows 8, Windows 8.1

or Windows 10 Start screen, or press the Windows key + R. 2. Type or paste the heart risk calculator into the search box, and then press Enter. 3. Click the heart risk calculator, and then follow the instructions to input your medical data and specify if you're a smoker or diabetic. 4. The app will display the percentage level of your heart risk, along with all the inputted data. 5. Click on the 'Heart Risk Calculator' button, and the window will close itself. Software
